

Veterinary Clinicians' Externship Program – Once weekly track

The Hebrew University veterinary teaching hospital welcomes veterinary clinicians who wish to observe the work of the hospital's clinical staff.

This program is based on observing work at one of the departments at the hospital once a week for a period of 12 weeks. Additional weeks will be charged.

The departments that may be visited are:

Small animal internal medicine
Small animal surgery
Small animal intensive care and emergency
Equine Medicine
Anesthesiology
Oncology
Cardiology
Neurology
Ophthalmology
Dermatology
Radiology

Work routine –

The extern is expected to be present according to the work routine of the students in the department he or she are assigned to. The daily routine in each department is different, and will be explained on the first day; however, the extern should arrive to the hospital by 8 am, and join the students and the clinicians in the rotation. Clinicians in externship programs take part in all the activities of the department as observers and will be expected to participate in general hospital activities such as seminars, ward rounds ect.

Fee -

Registration - A 300 NIS fee will be charged in the beginning of the externship. The first 12 weeks of the externship are free of charge. After the first 12 sessions, each additional externship day will cost 270 NIS for a month for the next 3 months, and after that 160 NIS a day.

Dress code –

The extern is expected to be appropriately dressed and wear a clean, ironed white coat with a name tag at all times. For rotation in the surgery department a scrub suit is needed. The hospital does not provide coats, scrubs or overalls.

Vaccination –

Because we are located in a rabies endemic area, proof of rabies vaccination (received within the previous 2 years) or of adequate rabies antibody titer is required.

Housing –

The veterinary teaching hospital is unable to provide for student accommodation.

Insurance –

It is the extern responsibility to make sure he/she has a medical insurance.

Interested persons should submit a written or electronic application to Ms. Efrat Wilf.

The applications should include:

- 1. Completed and signed application form.
- 2. Curriculum vita
- 3. Proof of rabies vaccination
- 4. A digitized passport photo

Clinical rotations are scheduled on a space available basis. Also, a personal interview might be needed prior to being accepted to the program.

After all the information is processed the applicant will receive an answer by electronic mail.
